Mr. Adams, as our readers in general know, is the son of John Quincy Adams. He comes maturally by the plack and patriousm that the properties of the operation, of so many mil'ms of percentage of the operation, of so many mil'ms of percentage over so many thousands of miles of a percentage. instrally by the pluck and patriotism that have prompted this tentative effort for the proservation of his country. The son of one President, and the grandson of another, it would have been strange indeed if the impending overthrow of the government had not stirred within him the impulses nortured by his great linvage. Let us hope that these notified impulses, once awakened, will rouse into still higher energy, and not sleep or relax, at least until soothed to languor by the glorious spectacle of a recouciled and peaceful land.

in the secsation movement, is the inculcation of the idea that by secession the Southern States can secure better guarantees for their free safety, than they can by remaining and when they have secured these guarantees, it is me argo they can resume their position in the The former may b Union. This is a fallacy. Let all the slave States withdraw from the Union, and it is dissolved rever. There can be no reconstruction. The nterests to be conciliated are too various and d reputied to admit of reconstruction. Let Ruther let those who favor secession, upon any and all themes or pretexts, prepare for a perholding States; and then they will receive either themselves por others.
